The College of New Jersey was initially chartered in 1746. The first classes were held in Elizabeth, New Jersey, in the parsonage of the president, the Reverend Jonathan Dickinson. Upon his death, the College moved to Newark, New Jersey, and was headed by the Reverend Aaron Burr, Sr. Classes were held both in his home and a small room above the local courthouse. In 1756, upon the sufficient completion of a new edifice in Princeton, the College moved south to that town and has remained there since. The first building, Nassau Hall, was one of the largest structures in the Colonies at that time. It was the first of many buildings on the campus to become noteworthy for their architecture, size, beauty, or exemplification of a particular style. As has been the case with other rural campuses less disturbed by urban changes or population explosions, and rooted in appreciation of tradition, many of Princeton's earliest buildings have been preserved. Although the Princeton campus does not provide an encyclopedic representation of America's architectural heritage, the Colonial, Victorian, Collegiate Gothic, and Post-Modern periods are well represented. Due to the diverse needs of the student body, Princeton's architecture incorporates a range of functional types, including lecture halls, dormitories, athletic facilities, and laboratories.

The Princeton University Library Collection of Historical Subject Files, Grounds and Buildings contains information relating to the buildings, grounds, and architects of Princeton University. The collection also includes information on the development of the campus and the various chronologies of construction and land acquisition that have been gathered. The collection contains photocopies from university publications (most notably The Nassau Lit, The Daily Princetonian, The Princeton College Bulletin, The Princeton Weekly Bulletin, and the Princeton Alumni Weekly) and regional newspapers (including The New York Times, The Princeton Herald, The Princeton Packet, and Town Topics) about University buildings, grounds, and architects of Princeton University. Other printed materials include insurance surveys, press releases from the Department of Public Information, and programs from dedication ceremonies. Less frequently, there are general interoffice correspondence; schematic floor plans; student papers; excerpts from books on architects; excerpts from the Trustees Minutes; campus maps or diagrams; bibliographic references; and invitations to ceremonies.

This collection also contains information pertaining to several buildings in the town that have been connected with the University in some way – some owned by the University, some owned by faculty members, some tied by the University through historical events. There is also a limited amount of information on the buildings used or owned by the privately operated eating clubs on Prospect Avenue.

The coverage of the collection is weakest for the earliest and most recent buildings, with the exception of Nassau Hall. The construction booms under Presidents McCosh (1868-1888) and Hibben (1910-1932) enjoy a proportionate amount of documentation. The selections from the "Olla-Podrida" in The Nassau Lit, in the late 19th century, are a gold mine of student opinion on the buildings from that time.
Organized into the following series:

Series 1, Buildings, 1838-2018
Series 2, Campus Ornamentation, dates not examined
Series 3, Architects, dates not examined
Series 4, Grounds, 1912-1943
Series 5, Buildings, dates not examined
Series 6, General, 1911-2018
Series 7, Beatrix Farrand Digital Images, 1909-1939

Access and Use

Access

Collection is open for research use.

Restrictions on Use and Copyright Information

Single photocopies may be made for research purposes. For quotations that are fair use as defined under U. S. Copyright Law, no permission to cite or publish is required. The Trustees of Princeton University hold copyright to all materials generated by Princeton University employees in the course of their work. If copyright is held by Princeton University, researchers will not need to obtain permission, complete any forms, or receive a letter to move forward with non-commercial use of materials from the Mudd Library. For materials where the copyright is not held by the University, researchers are responsible for determining who may hold the copyright and obtaining approval from them. If you have a question about who owns the copyright for an item, you may request clarification by emailing mudd@princeton.edu.

Remote patrons who wish to view the "Princeton University Photographs" within Series 7, Beatrix Farrand Digital Images, must contact the Environmental Design Archives of the University of California at Berkeley, as the Environmental Design Archives holds all rights to reproduction and use of the images.

Provenance and Acquisition

Varnum Lansing Collins, Class of 1892 and Secretary of the University (1917-1936), started the Historical Subject Files as a reference for his historical writing interests. An author of a history of the University and a guide to the campus and town, Collins collected a wide variety of materials pertaining to these topics. Eventually the files were transferred to the University Archives where staff continue to add to established files and create new headings. Originally stored in vertical filing cabinets, when files pertaining to particular topics grew significantly, they were removed to separate boxes. Over time, archives staff have removed multi-box portions concerning a single subject from the main body of files. The Department of Grounds and Buildings Files is one example. Many of the papers within the Department of Grounds and Buildings Files have been annotated by Collins, Earle Coleman (former University Archivist), or Gerald Breese (author of Princeton University Land, 1756-1984).

Appraisal

No information on appraisal is available.

Related Materials

Related Archival Material

The materials within each file are by no means exhaustive. More detailed information on the process of construction or renovation of some of these buildings is available in the Department of Grounds and Buildings Technical Correspondence Files. Researchers interested in further information are encouraged to consult the Trustees Minutes; the Historical Subject Files (especially the files on Princeton Borough); the Oversize Architectural Drawings; The Princeton Alumni Weekly (also an excellent source for photographic information); Alexander Leitch's A Princeton Companion (1978);
Thomas Wertenbaker's Princeton, 1746-1896 (1946); Constance Grieff's Princeton Architecture (1967); Gerald Breese's Princeton University Land, 1756-1984 (1986); and the 1981 survey of Princeton by the Joint Historical Sites Commission.

Series 4, Grounds, 1912-1943

Arrangement: No arrangement action taken or arrangement information not recorded at the time of processing.

Description: Series 4, Grounds, consists of information that is related to the acreage associated with the University and the history of the campus' landscaping. It contains files on such topics as the playing fields and gardens. The series also contains substantial files of correspondence, from 1912 to 1943, between Beatrix Farrand and University officials related to her work on the campus. (People interested in Beatrix Farrand should also consult Beatrix Farrand's American Landscapes, Her Gardens and Campuses, by Diana Balmori, and search the database for student theses on her work).

Series 5, Buildings, dates not examined

Description: Series 5, Princeton Borough, contains information on structures not located on the Princeton University campus itself, but which are closely related to the history of the school. Some of the buildings were used as professors' houses, and others in this section were owned by notable townspeople with connections to the University. In some cases, the property owned but not used by the University is represented. In the case of off-campus faculty housing, the line between Town and Gown becomes blurred. The series also contains numerous insurance surveys from the late 1940s and early 1950s. The Princeton Borough Historical Subjects files should be used in conjunction with the Grounds and Buildings files.

Arrangement: Series 5 is arranged alphabetically by building or location.

Series 6, General, 1911-2018

Description: Series 6, General, consists of information that is related to overarching themes shared by the buildings (such as "Campus Planning"). This series includes chronological lists that have been developed by various researchers. The folders entitled, "General, Architecture," and followed by inclusive dates are particularly rich in contextual articles. The material in the file on Utilities makes reference to the early history of electrical engineering studies at Princeton as well the physical plant of the campus. There are also files on particular topics, such as the accessibility of buildings.

Arrangement: Series 6 is arranged alphabetically by topic.

Acquisition and Appraisal: The series was transferred to the University Archives from the Office of the University Architect in February 2014. The Office purchased high-resolution copies of the selected images from the Environmental Design Archives at the University of California at Berkeley.

Description: The Beatrix Farrand Digital Images documents various buildings and grounds plans related to Princeton University and the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. The series is composed of prints, blueprints, drawings and photographs created in the early 20th century, all of which originated during Beatrix Farrand's appointment as the University's landscape architect. The Graduate College, the Engineering Building, University Place dormitories and the Chemical Laboratory are particularly well represented. The content of this series is not represented or duplicated in other series of the collection.

Arrangement: The series is arranged thematically into four files according to their format type (i.e., drawing or photograph).

Access:
The collection is open for research use, however access to the images is limited to campus domains only.

Restrictions on Use and Copyright Information: Single photocopies may be made for research purposes. For quotations that are fair use as defined under U. S. Copyright Law, no permission to cite or publish is required. The Trustees of Princeton University hold copyright to all materials generated by Princeton University employees in the course of their work. If copyright is held by Princeton University, researchers will not need to obtain permission, complete any forms, or receive a letter to move forward with non-commercial use of materials from the Mudd Library. For materials where the copyright is not held by the University, researchers are responsible for determining who may hold the copyright and obtaining approval from them. If you have a question about who owns the copyright for an item, you may request clarification by emailing mudd@princeton.edu. Remote patrons who wish to view the "Princeton University Photographs" with Series 7, Beatrix Farrand Digital Images, must contact the Environmental Design Archives of the University of California at Berkeley, as the Environmental Design Archives holds the originals of these photographs and holds all rights to reproduction and use of the images.
