Biography/History

A graduate from Princeton in 1939, Frederic Fox went on to serve in the Army in World War II under General Dwight D. Eisenhower. His articles in the New York Times on American community life brought him to the attention of then President Eisenhower. He served as an assistant in the White House till 1961. In 1964 he became the Recording Secretary at Princeton University and served in that position until 1981.

Description

The collection consists of the corrected typescript and corrected galley proof of the book 14 Africans vs. One American (1963) by Fox (Princeton Class of 1939), which describes his experiences in Northern Rhodesia at the Africa Literacy and Writing Center teaching journalism and writing to 14 young Africans from different countries.
